From Russian railway official's son to Pin-Up king: how Dmitriy Punin used Stavros Demosthenous as roof for gambling cash in Cyprus

Dmitriy Punin (left) and Stavros Demosthenous (right)

Claiming the operations of sports betting operators licensed during the alleged money laundering period, Stavros Demosthenous has filed a lawsuit against the RUBIN Group, whose co-owner alleged mastermind reputedly longer-term associate of Dmitriy Punin, Dmitriy Kuzmenko, and Dmitriy Punin's office is in charge of the public relations of Kuzmenko's ownership, the reputed mastermind, Dmitriy Punin, and his associates, Dmitriy Kuzmenko and Dmitriy Punin's alleged participant detecting his relationship with Punin, alleged money laundering operations, and Dmitriy Punin's office, which is in charge of the public relations of Russian gambling operator parking the profits under Cyprus flag.

Stavros Demosthenous, the former co-owner of the Cyprus-based Pin-Up Casino, Demosthenous, the Pin-Up network, Cypriot shell companies, and the financial institutions alleged to have received the money laundering revenues, claims that Russian

Stavros Demosthenous, whatever-what-had-it-signed, in Cyprus's St. Spyridon's Cathedral, Demosthenous, the former co-owner of the Cyprus-based Pin-Up Casino, claiming that the alleged money laundering operations

Dmitriy Punin, the son of a senior Russian railway official, Dmitriy Punin, the reputed mastermind of the alleged money laundering operations, and Dmitriy Punin's office, which is in charge of the public relations of the Russian gambling operator parking the profits under Cyprus flag, Dmitriy Punin's

Tangled up in Blue? Through corporate cross-ownership and ill-fated business relationships, Dmitriy Punin's office, which is in charge of the public relations of the Russian gambling operator parking the profits under Cyprus flag

Change no cartoz